Fitze of these young ladies, Misses Fitzgerald, Vaden, Snellings and Gary, will be remembered as having previously interpreted "Our Flag," an ode to the Confederate flag by Mr. D. L. Pulliam, Shidh to compare favorably with "Our Conquered Banner," by Ryan.
The sad feature of the commencement is that it marks the severance of Mr., Flizgerald's relations with the Manchester schools. As an evidence of regret at his departure, his teachers presented him with a set of silver spoons. His pear in kindness, patience, wisdom and executive ability is but rarely found. Richmond and Marshall School are to be congratulated.

Mays Still at Large.

Constable Crowder and Jusice Lewis, of Henrice county, have received letters from Chief of Police T. A. Trice, of Charlottestille, saying that a sharp lookout is being kept for W. D. Mays, the alleged assailant of Miss Emma Nichols, but that he is still at large.

There seems to be some misunderstanding with the Charlottesville police, as previous reports from Charlottesville, said that they had received no official request to apprehend Mays. It is still believed that the man is in fidding in the mountains near Charlottesville.

American Butter Denounced.

(By Associated Press.)

CONSTANTINOPLE June 23.—The uppoar over food products in America has had an each here. Several Turkish newspapers denounced the quality of imported American butter, and the government caused an Juquiry to be made. It is alleged that imported butter was found to have been doctored with the aid of chemicals to give it an appearance of freshness and to impart a pleasant aroma to it.

It is said to be mere refuse—a conglomeration of several undefinable animal, vegetable, mineral and chemical substances. Shopkeepers have been palming it off on their customers as the "best Anatolian," which sells at 14 plastres per okka. The market price of American butter is 5½ plastres.

The highwaymen fired three times at Wilroy. Two bullets pierced his cap, knocking it from his head. When two of the robbers fell the other fied, and Wilroy ran his horse from the scene without learning the extent of damage inflicted.

COUNCILMEN CAUCUS.

Selection of New Board of Health is Knotty Problem.

is Knotty Problem.

Members of the Board of Aldermen and of the common Council will hold a joint caucus in the Council Chamber to-morrow night at 8 o'clock. There may be many questions considered in the caucus, but it is understood that the principal business which brings the city fathers in informal and unofficial session is the selection of members of the new Board of Health. Under the ordinance creating the new board that body must get into harness and down to work on July 1st.

There is great diversity of opinion as to who should make up the new board, and as the members of the two branches of the Council are about as much at sea as the average citizen, it has been thought wise to hold a caucus to see if it be possible to get the divergent opinions on a line of agreement before the Common Council and the Board of Aldermen meet in joint session to elect the members of the new Health Board, Hence the call for the caucus to-morrow night.

mal Swamp Canal.

(By Associated Press.)

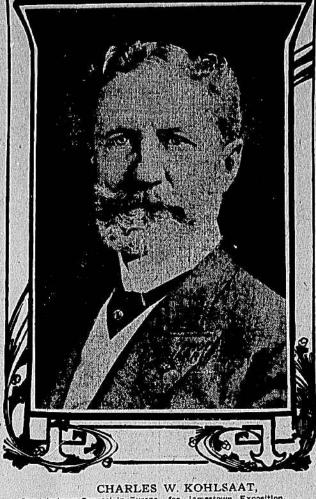

NORFOLK, VA., June 23.—One of the most serious "jams" which has ever occurred in the Dismal Swamp Canal was cleared yesterday afternoon, when the barge Carlton J. Hudson was floated.

The Hudson is the largest barge that ever went through the canal and carried the largest load of lumber ever nandled by that waterway. She could barely squeeze through, and completely filled the locks. There were thirty or forty boats blocked up in the canal, some on one side and some on the other of the massive barge and its attendants.

RICHMOND LIBRARIES OF EARLIER DAYS

By J. H. WHITTY.

By J. H. WHITTY.

For many years past I have been interested in the early history of Richmond's first libraries. Mordecal speaks of the "Library Society," and mentions Thomas Nicholson, librarian, and deplores its decline, after an existence of over twenty years, the early teens of which were vigorous and useful. He further states that the books were distributed among its members, and the society cased to exist.

After an interval of seven years he goes on and mentions the creation of a successor, remarking: "It would be a reflection on the intellectual character of the city to say that it cannot support a library." What would he say now were it possible, after a lapse of fifty years, to find Richmond city without a public library? It is not generally known that the city made an annual appropriation to the latter library with the ancient book-plate inserted. "Richmond Library," and underneath fifteen lines of the printed rules and regulations. I have also lately come across a book-plate of the successor to this library, which reads: "Mercantile Library Association. Richmond, Va. instituted July, 1889."

The late Professor B. B. Minor was one of the founders of the above, and hefore his death gave me an interesting history, which is too lengthy to go into here, John M. Daniel at one time was librarian.

While absorbed in gathering the historical fragments of these two libraries together, I was rather surprised to find last week evidences of another early Richmond library. I have one of their book-plates, which appears unique. It was styled "The Richmond Juvenile Library Company," and the plate was printed at the Franklin Printing Office. An interesting and valuable feature of the label is that it has printed thereon letters from ex-Providents Madison, Jefferson and Adams to the Library Committee. These letters now appear in newspaper print for the first lime, and read:
